This course provides tools, methods and processes to support countries in monitoring and reporting on SDG Indicator 6.4.2 “Level of water stress: freshwater withdrawal in percentage of available freshwater resources”.

- 2.5 hours
- Available in English

You will learn about

- Meaning and importance of the indicator 6.4.2
- Composition of the indicator and its variables
- Indicator’s use for policy development
- Data disaggregation and corresponding data requirements
- Processes of collecting data, computing and reporting
- Mechanisms to ensure quality of the data collection process and its outcome
- Implementation of the monitoring process at national level
This course is available through the FAO eLearning Center. Please visit the Center and browse our extensive catalogue in multiple languages. Register once to access over 100 titles. All courses are available as a global public good for free.

How to access the course

1. Go to the e-learning center: www.fao.org/elearning, and select the category “Sustainable Development Goal indicators”
2. Register and log-in with your user name and password.

Registration is fast and easy.